Women in Sciences and Engineering

SCOPE OF THIS CONFERENCE

Women in Sciences and Engineering have immensely contributed to the growth of society. Multi-tasking role of women in our society has mostly hindered their pursuance of science and engineering as a career in the past. Thus, Women in Sciences and Engineering face a different challenge of balancing their professional and family life. There are certain behavioural and social hurdles specific to each women in their work environment. In addition, the different working pattern of a female researchers also need to be perceived in the right spirit. The stigma associated with the society's atypical and specific bias towards the role of men and women requires a relook. The changing role of women in today's society demand equal distribution of responsibilities.

This conference provides a platform to the women frontiers in the sciences and engineering to share their contribution (via both oral talks & poster) to the society and advise emerging women researchers in constructive engagements and management to result productive research output. Male participants are encouraged to contribute posters.
